

AVIATION WORKERS HAVE RIGHTS!

U.S. Department of Labor

Occupational Safety and Health Administration

The law says that employers cannot retaliate against aviation workers for exercising their rights under the Wendell H. Ford Aviation Investment and Reform Act for the 21st Century. For example, workers have a lawful right to:

- Notify a supervisor, employer, or the federal government of an alleged violation of Federal Aviation Administration regulations or other federal laws related to air carrier safety
- Refuse to violate air carrier safety rules under certain circumstances

If an employer has retaliated against you, act quickly! Workers must file a retaliation complaint with OSHA within 90 days after the alleged adverse action occurred or you became aware of it.
