

Whistleblower Protection for Employees Reporting Unsafe Intermodal Cargo Containers

Employees are protected from retaliation for reporting unsafe intermodal cargo containers or engaging in related activities by the International Safe Container Act (ISCA).

Covered Employees

Under ISCA, employees of companies, individuals, local governments, and certain interstate compact agencies are protected from retaliation for engaging in protected activity regarding an unsafe intermodal cargo container.

An intermodal cargo container is an article of transport equipment designed to facilitate the transportation of goods by one or more modes of transport, without intermediate reloading.

Protected Activity

An employee may not be discharged or otherwise retaliated against for:

- Reporting the existence of an unsafe intermodal cargo container
- Reporting a violation of ISCA or regulations issued under ISCA, including procedures for the testing, inspection, and initial approval of containers

What Is Retaliation?

Retaliation is an adverse action against an employee because of activity protected by ISCA. Retaliation can include several types of adverse actions, such as:

- Firing or laying off
- Demoting
- Denying overtime or promotion
- Disciplining
- Denying benefits
- Failing to hire or rehire
- Intimidation or harassment
- Making threats
- Reassignment to a less desirable position or actions affecting promotion prospects

- Reducing pay or hours
- More subtle actions, such as isolating, ostracizing, mocking, or falsely accusing the employee of poor performance
- Blacklisting (intentionally interfering with an employee's ability to obtain future employment)
- Constructive discharge (quitting when an employer makes working conditions intolerable due to the employee's protected activity)
- Reporting an employee to the police or immigration authorities

Deadline for Filing Complaints

Complaints must be filed within 60 days after the employee learns of the adverse action.

How to File an ISCA Complaint

An employee, or his or her representative, can file an ISCA complaint with OSHA by visiting or calling his or her local OSHA office, sending a written complaint to the closest OSHA office, or filing a complaint online. No particular form is required and complaints may be submitted in any language.

Written complaints may be filed by fax, electronic communication, hand delivery during business hours, U.S. mail (confirmation services recommended), or other third-party commercial carrier.

The date of the postmark, fax, electronic communication, telephone call, hand delivery, delivery to a third-party commercial carrier, or in-person filing at an OSHA office is considered the date filed.

To file a complaint electronically, please visit www.osha.gov/whistleblower/WBComplaint.

When OSHA receives a complaint, the agency will first review it to determine whether certain basic requirements are met, such as whether the complaint was filed on time. If so, the complaint will then be investigated according to the procedures required by 46 U.S.C. § 80507.

Results of the Investigation

If the evidence supports an employee's claim of retaliation and a voluntary settlement cannot be reached, the Secretary of Labor, through the Office of the Solicitor of Labor (SOL), may litigate the case in U.S. District Court. The Secretary may seek relief to make the employee whole, including:

- Reinstatement.
- Payment of back pay with interest.
- Compensation for expenses the employee may have incurred as a result of the retaliation with interest; and for emotional distress.
- Punitive damages.
- Non-monetary relief.

If the OSHA Regional Administrator whose office investigated the case finds that the evidence does not support an employee's claim of retaliation, the employee may seek review by the Directorate of Whistleblower Protection Programs (DWPP) in Washington, D.C. by filling a request for such review, within 15 days of the employee's receipt of the dismissal letter and sending a copy to the Regional Administrator.
